“ Phillip was my youngest brother. He was a great lead guitar player as well as a great singer and harmonizer. I remember when he was about 16 years he came up to me and asked me to teach him how to play guitar. I taught him his first chords and needless to say, he ran off and left me. He went on to become one of the best guitar players i have ever seen. He had such a good heart as evidenced by his deep love of animals. He always had cats and dogs that he loved dearly. He joined a number of very successful bands over the years including The Mersey Band and Hot Rod Otis. Both of the bands were in great demand in clubs and private parties all over Huntsville and surrounding areas. I am so proud of my brother and will always love and cherish him. See you soon, my baby brother. Tell Joe I love him and miss him and will see him soon.

“ How do you say goodbye to a man who has been a part of your life for over fifty years? I grew up with Phillip ‘Moose’ Adcock. We shared both happy, sad, and hilarious times. We loved the music of the sixties- the Beatles in particular- the Allman Brothers and even some of the early Bee-Gees-lol- loved to hear him sing ‘gotta get a message to you’. We spent countless hours playing double leads and harmonizing together in smoke-filled rooms and whiskey-drenched bars all over Huntsville. We played in several bands together in the sixties, seventies, and early eighties, most notably the ‘Mersey’ band. I learned a great deal from him about music and especially the guitar. He was a mentor in those early days. The last time I talked to him he was not well- the last few years had not been kind, his health was failing, and it broke my heart. I will miss him. I loved him and will forever cherish the memories I have of Moose. We had some damn good times, brother. Rest in peace.
